Living life the Malibu way

Jane Sullivan Hemenez, 97, writes book on six decades in Malibu.

By Kim Devore
Entertainment Editor

Jane Sullivan Hemenez is a woman of astounding accomplishments. At the ripe young age of 97, she has written her first book, "Malibu: A Good Way of Life."

It is already selling at the local bookstores.

The tale begins when Sullivan and her mom picked up a beach cottage on Los Flores in 1948. The price was a whopping $11,000! Looking back, she says "Never did I think I would be able to live on the beach all the time."

Back in the day, Malibu was a different place without shopping centers and posh shops. Her book is a love letter written from the heart about a different place and precious memories.

"How fortunate we were to live in Malibu in the forties," she writes. "Blooming geranium fields formed colorful patterns. We gloried in the wild open spaces. The sand and rocks were ours to explore."

The book is filled with wonderful black and white photos of bathing beauties in one-piece suits frolicking on the beach. See Sullivan Hemenez, page B8
