A day in the sun

The Children's Lifesaving Foundation (CLF) held its annual Surf Camp4All event at Zuma Beach on Friday, treating children, young adults and families from local homeless shelters to a day of surf, sun, food and bonding.

For some, it was the first time they had ever felt sand under their feet, caught a wave or eaten pizza with friends and family on the beach.

About 100 CLF youngsters and family members were on hand at Friday's event, which offered surf lessons, volleyball and plenty of sunshine.

uncertain of her future, spent the day tanning and mingling with other youths. CLF founder Maria D'Angelo began helping Perez 10 years ago, and thanks to CLF, the 20-year-old's biggest problem today is deciding on what graduate school to attend. She credits D'Angelo for her road to success, calling her an "Earth angel."

"When I first met [Maria], I was antisocial, now I am a public speaker at events for the organization," said Perez. "She did not just help me, she helped change generations of families who were like me."

Perez plans on attending graduate school for specialized nursing. She recounted how D'Angelo "ambushed" her 10 years ago and took her at a period when her dad suffered through serious kidney disease. Fortunately, her dad is doing well after receiving a life-saving kidney transplant four years ago.

For the past 21 years, D'Angelo has been using her Malibu-based organization to help generations of homeless families claim new lives by providing them homes, education and overall support.

Mountaineering doctor speaks in Malibu about Mount Everest journey, Sherpa people.

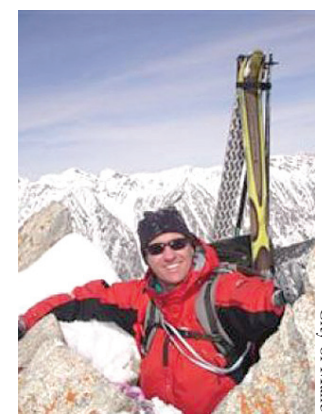

By McKenzie Jackson
Special to The Malibu Times

Dr. Scott McIntosh's Mount Everest expedition in spring 2007 was a whirlwind — frigid temperatures, dangerous Himalayan terrain and that indescribable exhilaration of standing 29,029 feet above sea level on the world's highest peak.

But the aspect of his journey that stood out the most was observing Sherpas prepare climbers for the challenging trek.

"Seeing how the Sherpas worked together, seeing how naturally at home they There's hardly anyone of a certain age who doesn't remember when songs like "I Want to Hold Your Hand" first exploded on the radio.

It was the first wave of the British invasion in the U.S. The crowds went wild, and America's youth was forever changed. Six months after The Beatles landed on American shores through their unforgettable "Ed Sullivan Show" appearance, they released their first film, "A Hard Day's Night."

Now, 50 years after Beatlemania took America by storm, "A Hard Day's Night" is back in a fully restored digital
